An Interview with Dean David Rudenstine 17

Cardozo's fifth dean talks with Cardozo Life editor Susan Davis about his priorities for the Law School.

Fighting for "Hearts and Minds": Towards a Foreign Policy of Information Space 21

In the war against terrorism, the United States came up short in its ability to influence and shape opinion internationally and to dampen the hatreds instilled by its enemies. Professor Price calls for a new front on the war, where a strategy to change ideas is developed and implemented through the media.

Cardozo lost two alumni in the events of September 11, Andrew Zucker '99 and Barbara Bracher Olson '89. At a memorial service, they were remembered by family, friends, and professors. Cardozo Life reprints eulogies by Suzanne Pronesti '99, Prof. John O. McGinnis, and Solicitor General of the United States Theodore B. Olson.

COVER PHOTOS: Six months after September 11, two columns of light were projected nightly for a month as a symbol of remembrance. "The Sphere," a sculpture by Fritz Koenig that had resided in the World Trade Center plaza, was moved to Battery Park, where it remains a monument to fostering peace.
